

CEO of NMP to step down

The Board of Network of Music Partners (NMP) has today announced that NMP CEO, Malin Skogman Jonsson, is stepping down after more than seven years in the role and will be leaving NMP by the end of the year.

In order to ensure the smoothest continuation for the organisation, CIO Tine Oswald will step up and take over the CEO position, upon returning from maternity leave on December 6th. And Mark Steven will be deputy CEO to support Tine on the offline.

Malin Jonsson Skogman comments: “Naturally, it has been a difficult decision to leave NMP. However, after some 7 ½ years as CEO, the time has come to move on and let someone else lead the company. I am extremely proud of the many achievements NMP and its fantastic team has accomplished under my leadership. “

NMP Board member and CEO, PRS for Music, Andrea Czapary Martin, comments:

"Malin Skogman Jonsson has been instrumental in transforming NMP into a world-class service provider, by setting a clear vision for the company, delivering cost efficiencies, and driving results. We commend Jonsson for her dedication during her tenure, and welcome Tine Oswald to the CEO position. Tine's previous experience as CIO of NMP since 2016, gives her a deep understanding of the organisation and will ensure that NMP's administrative services continue to be delivered to the highest standard, ensuring maximised distributions for rights holders."
